The FBI has seen the number of inquiries from people running criminal background checks on potential gun buys increase during the past several years. Here's a look at the number of requests for selected years. mct

16.3 MILLION 2011

12.7 MILLION 2008

MILLION

MCT

FORT WORTH, Texas Gun sales are booming.

Enthusiasts are stocking up on guns and ammunition, and some in the industry are wondering whether sales are spiking as they did after Barack Obama won the presidency in 2008. That rush created a nationwide shortage.

Last year, the FBI received more than 16.3 million inquiries from people running criminal background checks on potential gun buyers. That's up from 12.7 million in 2008 and 11.4 million in 2007, FBI records show.

Texas had about 1 million requests for background checks in each of the past four years, the second most behind Kentucky, which had nearly double that. Officials say Kentucky's numbers are high because fresh background checks are run every month there on gun owners with concealed-weapons permits.

Some say the uptick in sales at gun stores could be linked to anything from the arrival of tax refunds to a spending spree by fans of the National Geographic Channel's "Doomsday Preppers" show, which chronicles people preparing for the end of the world. Others tie the trend to the prospect of President Obama's re-election and the thought he would be tough on gun laws.

"I'm constantly getting questions from people in the gun community about this [issue]," said Alan Korwin, author of nine gun law books, including "Gun Laws of America," and operator of gunlaws.com. "People are concerned that if Obama wins, as a lame duck, he will go after firearms in a way we have never seen before.

Before taking office, Obama said he respected the constitutional right to bear arms. In 2007, after more than three dozen Chicago children had been killed, he also said he wanted to restore the ban on assault weapons.

In the days and weeks after the 2008 election, people began stocking up on firearms and ammunition, eventually creating a shortage. It took nearly a year for supplies to become more plentiful and for prices, which spiked because of the demand, to come

Then-President Clinton signed the last socalled assault weapons ban on Sept. 13, 1994, and it expired 10 years later. Just months after he signed the ban, voters went to the polls and the House and Senate flipped from Democratic to Republican control.

When the assault weapons ban came up in Congress for reauthorization in 2004, the measure failed.

"It's bad politics to be on the wrong side of the Second Amendment at election time." Wayne LaPierre, executive vice president of the National Rifle Association, has said.

U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder has said the Obama administration "has consistently favored the reinstitution of the assault weapons ban. It is something that we think was useful in the past with regard to the reduction that we've seen in crime and certainly would have a positive impact on our relationship and the crime situation in Mexico."

Let's talk about politics—at work

Psst! Hey, you! Look over your shoulder. Now move somewhere out of sight of the boss and bring your voice down to a whisper, OK?

I want to talk politics.

Seriously, people. It's the day after Super Tuesday, and the Illinois primary is less than two weeks away. As a story in Tuesday's RedEye pointed out, it's only natural to want to say something about this year's political hoopla to the people you work with for eight hours a day.

So why do so many people avoid those conversations altogether-lumping in politics with taboo topics such as religion or personal relationships? In some workplaces, all that's "acceptable" is mindless blabber about sports, movies and the weather. Yawn.

It goes without saying that more people in Chicago are registered Democrats than anything else. So Republicans like me may feel even less comfortable opening our mouths, lest we be ostracized by our colleagues for showing we have an "R" next to our names.

But you'd be surprised how many of your co-workers are interested in such things. The truth is, discussing politics and news around the water cooler is just as acceptable as anything else you saw on TV last night. You just have to know how to do it right.

Here are my three simple rules for discussing politics in the workplace.

1. Know your audience

Don't look to pick fights with anybody in the workplace. That's just a dumb idea in general. I once worked with a hard-core liberal whom I'm still good friends with today. Anytime he had a political ax to grind after reading something some Republican said that he didn't like, he would shoot straight for my desk. It's as if I were the only conservative person in the world he knew. I didn't mind discussing such things on coffee breaks or over lunch, but during regular works hours, I don't have time to conduct debates at my desk.

2. Keep it civil

This rule really shouldn't be difficult to obey. Look at how many jokes Jon Stewart and Jay Leno crack every night about what's happening on the campaign trail. That alone should demonstrate how much comedic material politics provide the world. I wouldn't recommend discussing counterterrorism policy or abortion with your co-workers - that's just exercising common sense. But Mitt Romney's "weather man" looks and personality or President Obama's rendition of Al Green are fair game.

3. Get off your high horse

Unless you're an elected official working in the state legislature, you're not at work to solve the world's problems. And unless the politician being discussed is one of your parents, don't take any crack about them seriously. If we've lost our ability to laugh at such things, then the terrorists have won! (Just kidding.)

Stick to these guidelines, and you won't have to feel like you're hiding from the office political police just by asking your colleagues whom they voted for. And Chicago Democrats, cut your fellow Republicans some slack: We didn't like Bush either.

What will it be? The rumored iPad3, the iPad HD? Apple has thrown out some strong hints that Wednesday's press event in San Francisco (starting at noon Chicago time) will introduce a new iteration of the iPad, but nothing has been confirmed. We were wondering: What would you do to get your hands on a new rumored iPad? Here's what our Facebook fans and Twitter followers said.

Bobby Hillman I would let everyone else make fools of themselves while enslaving themselves to technological gadgets.

Jason Squires Not much. I have an iPhone, and a powerbook. What would I need it for?

@pmichelich
I would shave the apple logo in my back hair and sun burn the image by walking up and down MI Ave all afternoon.

@GutenMorganChi l'd say cut off my hands, but then I wouldn't be able to get my hands on one would I? hmm.

@One4theDagger I will stick with the first generation....and wait for the one that can make you breakfast in bed.

@jazcan I'm going to guess the new iPad has a better display & same camera as the iPhone 4s. I would love one but happy w/ my iPad 2

REALITY CHECK

Want to be a reality star? Before you get ready to flip that table, you should know the audition do's and don'ts. Jonathan Tanzman, who casts reality shows, said his turn-offs include bribery with gifts and too much cologne.

And stalking. Tanzman said a woman once came to his apartment and begged him for a TV spot.

"I don't know how [she] found me," said Tanzman, who is based in L.A. "I said, 'Listen, it's so sweet you came, but you have to go through the regular process."

He said wannabes send him books about themselves and sometimes dress in crazy costumes-but in the end it comes down to personality.

RedEye created the game of "Reality Show" to show stars in training what can get them ahead in this business and what gets the door slammed in their faces - for reals.

TLC's third season of "My Strange Addiction" showcases a woman who boasts size 38KKK breasts and a guy who dates his car.

Reality producers in Chicago and beyond go niche as oddball shows steal the spotlight

By Tracy Swartz

When Kesha Davis of University Park applied to be on "My Strange Addiction" two years ago, she didn't play up her personality or start a fight on camera.

She didn't dress in outlandish clothes or give herself a nickname like Snooki, JWoww or Ke$ha.

All she did was email producers a brief description of

"I told them I was interested in doing the show because my addiction was eating toilet paper," said Davis, 35, who used to knock back several squares of toilet paper a day as she curled her hair in the bathroom or ran errands in her car.

Davis' addiction alone was enough to land her a spot on the first season of "My Strange Addiction." She said her appearance on the show, which included a therapy session, helped her cut back on toilet paper consumption to a few times a week.

Because she wasn't seeking fame, Davis may seem like a nontraditional reality star-but she's not. Reality shows are increasingly targeting niche hobbies, occupations and quirks - from buying storage lockers to hoarding to losing excessive weight to dating mobsters.

It's not enough to be a "housewife" to land on "Real Housewives" or a "coupon clipper" to get on "Extreme Couponing." Reality show producers with Chicago ties told RedEye they're constantly on the lookout for unusual talent and characters, and there's no limit to the oddball behavior they're willing to showcase on TV.

On his website, tiftv.com, Silver has a place where people can pitch him ideas for reality shows. The typical pitch he hears? Versions of "Extreme Makeover," where houses or lives undergo renovation. He said he's found that charitable, feel-good shows don't really work.

The typical pitch he doesn't want to hear? Anything that's a cross between two shows.

"I always cringe when I hear it's a 'cross between,' " Silver said. "I'm really looking for things out of the box."

Chicago man charged in hacking ring

Chicago Tribune

A 27-year-old Chicago man was one of five computer hackers charged Tuesday for crimes related to high-profile cyber attacks against major Jeremy Hammond corporations and government entities.

Jeremy Hammond was arrested late Monday in Chicago. The FBI confirmed that it raided a home in the 2900 block of South Quinn Street in Bridgeport.

Authorities have investigating been Anonymous, a decentralized international collective of "hacktivists," or people who use computer networks for political protests and other actions. Anonymous is connected to a number of related groups, including LulzSec, Internet Feds and AntiSec.

According to federal authorities, Hammond identified himself as a member of Anti-Sec. He was charged with counts of computer hacking conspiracy, computer hacking and conspiracy to commit access-device fraud. Authorities said he conspired to hack into the computer systems of Stratfor, an Austin, Texas-based intelligence firm that conducts Hammond and fellow AntiSec members stole confidential information, including employee emails and account information for about 860,000 Stratfor clients, according to authorities. They also allegedly stole credit card information for about 60,000 users and made $700,000 in unauthorized charges.

According to federal authorities, Hammond was known online by a variety of monikers, including "Anarchaos," "tylerknowsthis" and "crediblethreat." AntiSec members had posted a document with links to the stolen Stratfor information on a file-sharing website and called the document "Anonymous Lulzxmas rooting you proud," affirming their relationship with Anonymous, authorities said.

His lawyer, James Fennerty, said he considers Hammond a likable man with strongly held beliefs.

Obama: Chicago can handle NATO

Chicago Tribune

President Obama on Tuesday said he was confident in Chicago's ability to host a gathering of world leaders and played down the notion that security concerns had anything to do with the decision to move the May G-8 meeting from Chicago to Camp David.

In response to a question during a press briefing in Washington, Obama noted that the NATO summit scheduled for the same weekend still will be held in Chicago, bringing him and other world leaders to the city.

"I always have confidence in Chicago being able to handle security issues," said Obama, whose 2008 presidential election-night victory party was held in Grant Park with a massive crowd in attendance. "We know how to deal with a crowd, and I'm sure your new mayor will be quite attentive to detail in making sure everything goes off well."

He reiterated the story line from the White House and Chicago City Hall after word broke Monday of the schedule change, saying leaders from the Group of Eight nations felt more comfortable in a more intimate setting.

The G-8 "tends to be a more informal setting where we talk about a wide range of issues in an intimate way," Obama said. "People would enjoy being in a more casual backdrop."

Cop sentenced to 3 years in fatal DUI crash

Chicago Tribune

A Cook County judge on Tuesday sentenced Chicago police Officer Richard Bolling to 3 years in prison for killing a 13-year-old boy in an off-duty DUI crash and fleeing the scene.

Bolling, 43, had tears in his eyes as Judge Matthew Coghlan announced his decision.

In January a criminal court jury found Bolling, a 17-year veteran narcotics officer, guilty of aggravated DUI, reckless homicide and leaving the scene of a fatal accident.

Coghlan also ordered that, after his release from prison, Bolling talk to recruits at the Chicago Police Academy about "how to properly handle an investigation into one of their own."

RICK SANTORUM HANGS TOUGH AGAINST MITT ROMNEY ON SUPER TUESDAY

COLUMBUS, Ohio Mitt Romney chalked up Super Tuesday wins in Virginia, Vermont and Massachusetts, seeking to fasten his grip on the Republican presidential nomination by dominating the single biggest day of balloting in the hard-fought primary campaign.

But Rick Santorum won North Dakota, Tennessee and Oklahoma and was locked in a neck-and-neck fight with the former Massachusetts governor in Ohio.

Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich carried Georgia, home of the district he represented for years in Congress.

"I want you to know: In the morning, we are going to Alabama, we're going on to Mississippi, we're going on to Kansas - and that's just this week," Gingrich told cheering supporters in Atlanta, referring to the next set of contests.

A short time later, speaking to backers in Steubenville, Ohio, Santorum also vowed to "Tonight, it's clear, it's clear. We've won races all across this country against the odds. When they thought, 'Oh, OK, he's finally finished,' we keep coming back," said the former Pennsylvania senator, joined at the podium by his wife, six of his seven children and his 93-yearold mother. We begin our imaginary quest with an establishing shot of Old Town's Twin Anchors Restaurant at Eugenie and Sedgwick streets. Thanks for removing the RedEye honor box with Photoshop, Sony.

Inside Twin Anchors, fans look beaten down-doesn't Cubs Nation always look like this?—before they erupt after a "strike three!" call.

Now we're inside Wrigley Field, and the first thing we see is a female popcorn vendor kissing what looks like a Wrigley security guard before we look out onto the field from the stands, with Cubs players piling on top of one another near the pitcher's mound.

sports CUBSTEASE

Dancing in the streets! Fireworks! Now the North Siders just have to win ...

RedEve

In case you missed it Tuesday, the Cubs won the World Series. In Sony's commercial for "MLB 12 The Show," that is.

Yep, they went there.

The commercial took Chicago by storm, dominating social media sites, blogs and water cooler talk all over the city. It's scarily realistic, featuring scenes shot around the city and incorporating Chicago landmarks. Add some CGI fireworks and confetti, and it's almost as if the Cubs really did win the World Series.

Hopefully that's not as close as the Cubs get. Here's a breakdown of the commercial, scene by scene.

"The Chicago Cubs have won the World Series" blares from the TV, and next we are outside looking at the city's skyline, with the Aon Center's lights turned on to read "Cubs" while the Blue Cross & Blue Shield Tower's lights read "Cubs Win" as fireworks explode over the city.

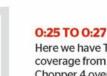

including fans outside the Salt and Pepper Diner at 3537 N. Clark St. Then we see a bro with his arms skyward looking out over Wrigley Field from a nearby deck or rooftop and fans outside the famous red marquee emblazoned with

A father-the religious kind-double fist-pumps as he listens to the coverage on a tiny, portable radio. That's so

Here we have TV news coverage from "CTV4's" Live Chopper 4 overlooking a street full of crazed fans jumping up and down, waving flags and holding signs as the announcer says "the North Side of Chicago can breathe a sigh of relief." From the TV graphics, we know it's 10:04 p.m. and 45 degrees Sounds about right.

0:19 TO 0:23

From above the city again, looking down at the Wabash and State Street bridges over the Chicago River, we see people streaming into the streets, confetti falling-from the nearby Trump International Hotel and Tower or Marina City towers, perhaps, which also make the shot. At 0:21, some poor schmuck goes nuts inside his office. Didn't plan for the day off, dude?

0:23 TO 0:24

An old guy-in a nursing home?—cuts off a beard he's presumably been growing since the last Cubs title in 1908.

Aaand back to reality. The Cubs pileup at home plate switches from real life to video game and we see the man from the first scene holding a PlayStation controller, a tear streaming down his cheek. He has a "1908" pennant in his apartment, which is next to the "L." A Red Line train goes by as the trailer switches to full-on video-game preview mode. It was fun while it lasted ...

Manning overboard

Who's got what it takes to lure the superstar quarterback?

RedEye

It finally happened.

The inseparable duo of quarterback Peyton Manning and the Indianapolis Colts is reportedly done. ESPN reported Tuesday that the Colts would release Manning on Wednesday. After that, Manning will be a free agent, and several teams seemingly would love to have him. Here are a few of them and why he would and would be a good fit there.

WASHINGTON REDSKINS

Good fit: Well, their best quarterback right now is Rex Grossman. Think about that. Not a good fit: The 'Skins aren't exactly stacked at wide receiver and quarterback. They need more than Peyton.

MIAMI DOLPHINS

Good fit: The Dolphins have a big-time receiver in Brandon Marshall and a running game anchored by Reggie Bush. All the Dolphins need is a quality quarterback.

Not a good fit: He'd be back in the AFC East and facing Tom Brady twice a year.

SEATTLE SEAHAWKS

Good fit: They play in a dome like Indianapolis and only Tarvaris Jackson stands in his way at OB.

Not a good fit: It just seems like Peyton is not a Seattle type of guy. I mean, can you see him playing there?

Rip is not ripped, thankfully

The Bulls got some good news and bad news Tuesday. But mostly good news. Starting shooting guard Richard Hamilton, injured in Monday night's win over Indiana, has a shoulder contusion and sprain, not a separation. He's listed as day-to-day. Hamilton has appeared in just 16 games so far this season.

Rockers Scattered Trees are ready to move on from the sad stuff

RETREAT & RETURN

Indie rock quintet Scattered Trees crafted its bruising sophomore album, "Sympathy," following the sudden passing of frontman Nate Eiesland's father.

"Going through that process, I put those thoughts and feelings and grief into the songs," said the 27-year-old Eiesland, who lives in Ukrainian Village. "That was really helpful."

"Sympathy" pairs singer-songwriter Eiesland's heart-heavy words with musical backdrops that shift from mournful (the Coldplay-esque "Love and Leave") to propulsive ("Four Days Straight," which sounds like a downtrodden spin on Franz Ferdinand's "Take Me Out").

Eiesland told RedEye that fans can expect a sunnier sound on the next album, which the group is set to record in Toronto in April with producer David Newfeld (Broken Social Scene, Los Campesinos!).

The title of your song "Four Days Straight" almost sounds like the start of a Guinness World Records challenge, like, "He hopped on one foot for four days straight." What do you think you could do to get your name in the book? Literally what could I accomplish? Oh man. Honestly, I don't consider myself a jack of many trades.

What about trying to break the record for number of bananas eaten in under a minute?

I'm pretty much wired for music, though. Maybe I could break the most strings in one concert? That record seems attainable.

How would you describe the direction of the new material you're working on?

Musically, there's a lot more energy and up-tempo stuff. "Sympathy" was such a sad concept record. It was so important for me to make, but the material lent itself to music that was hard to tap your foot to, you know? Rather than feeling like we're tearing up onstage every night, we just want to go out there and have a blast.

Is that direction reflected in the lyrics as well?

I don't think I'll ever completely get away from the subjects of death and mortality. But I'm not as consumed with grief as I was a couple years ago, and I think that's starting to come out.

Where does that interest in mortality stem from?

Well, I think I've been interested in it since I was a kid, like when you go to your first funeral and realize there's an end.

Were you dark and mysterious like Winona Rvder's "Beetlejuice" character?

Definitely not. As a teenager I was pretty amiable. I didn't have many enemies. School was fun for me. I was less angsty and more of a ham.

In December you posted a photo of yourself on Twitter captioned "playing in a local legend's man-cave" without offering any other details. What was the story behind that picture?

Last winter we were squatting in this house in this little town in northern Minnesota. We went to the local music store and introduced ourselves just to see what kind of things were happening around town, and the music store owner directed us to this older guy named Orrin Foslein. We'd go over to his house, throw back some whiskey and he'd tell us stories about playing banjo and jazz guitar all over the world—even places like Carnegie

Were you trying to do the whole Bon Iver, escape-to-the-woods thing?

I wish. That sounds nice. This was more like we don't have a place to lay down, so we're going to this house that we know nobody is living in.

Then you'd head over to Foslein's place for late-night jam sessions?

That's exactly what it was. He would call me and ask if I could help move his tractor from one side of the yard to the other or something, and we'd end up spending the entire evening playing these 1930s guitars that sounded amazing. He was also an instrument builder and a luthier, and he restored instruments for the Smithsonian. He was like, "You gotta play this one! Now try this one!" Then he'd teach me these old songs from the '20s. It was a blast, man.

What's your go-to song now if you're knocking back whiskey and someone hands you a guitar?

Well, he taught me this one song about a prostitute in the '20s. It was called "Gladys Isn't Gratis Anymore."

What's the last album you bought?

"Come Up for Air" by this band called the White Birch. I got the vinyl, which was cool because that record holds a special place for me.

Song you've listened to on repeat recently?

"Lover's Spit" by Broken Social Scene

Song you never want to hear again?

I feel bad, but probably anything by the Fray. I just don't want any fan of Scattered Trees to be like, "Oh, you [bleep]. I love the Fray!"

Best concert you've seen in the past year? Arcade Fire with the National

New band you don't know personally that deserves to be big?

Beach House's "Devotion" and "Teen Dream" both killed me. I have really high hopes for what they do.

Favorite movie ever?

That would probably be "Almost Famous."

Chicago's best music venue?

If I had to just pick one it'd probably be Schubas. They're so [bleeping] nice there, and the crowds are always so fun and it's small enough that there's always a great energy. It's a great place.

SONG REVIEWS

You're a Lie

What: The rock guitar god and his hair have returned, this time with yet another "band," featuring Myles Kennedy of Alter Bridge on vocals. "You're a Lie," the first single from his album "Apocalyptic Love." debuted online Monday.

Why it rocks: Duh, it's Slash playing guitar. But seriously, this has that distinctive Slash sound he made famous in Guns N' Roses and Velvet Revolver. The riffs are catchy, and the solo, while not executed at light speed, is tasty for guitar nerds. The song itself chugs along at a singular, relentless pace, only varying in volume.

Why it doesn't rock: Kennedy sounds like a mix of an '80s glam singer and moody grunge mumbler. He does have some pipes, though, that might remind some of GN'R singer Axl Rose. The chorus could use some work, as well, as it seems uninspired—and repetitive—standing up against Slash's fine guitar work. BRIAN MOORE, SPORTS EDITOR

Electric Fever

Free Energy

What: The first single from the Philadelphia rockers' upcoming sophomore album, "Love Sign." The band's debut, "Stuck on Nothing," was one of the most purely enjoyable records of 2010. Recommended if you like: Cowbell, singing along with choruses, and Bachman-Turner Overdrive's "You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet." It's impossible not to hear the similarities. Does that get in the way of being thrilled for the band's ridiculously hummable, air guitar-worthy return? Not at all.

Avoid if you hate: Fun, summer, driving with the windows down and the music loud.

Worth nothing: Paul Sprangers probably should stop singing lines like, "I feel it coming alive." They were all over "Stuck on Nothing," and we get the idea. MATT PAIS, MOVIES AND MUSIC GUY

FOR REDEYE

"Savage Love" columnist Dan Savage knows he's making as many enemies as friends with the It Gets Better anti-bullying project.

"With all the right sort of soft-focus uplift that's accrued to [the It Gets Better project], what people lose sight of is that I did this," Savage said with a laugh. "And I'm kind of an aggressive jerk—and combative in that way that an Irish Catholic from the North Side of Chicago can be."

The Seattle-based Savage returns to Chicago Friday to join his brother, Northwestern University professor Bill Savage, at the Steppenwolf for Young Adults production of "FML: How Carson McCullers Saved My Life" and participate in a post-show discussion about bullying and It Gets Better. But he remembers the time before It Gets Better's launch, when this would have been taboo.

"If we tried to reach out because we empathized and understood and could share our coping mechanisms and how we got through it, we would be accused of being pedophiles and trying to recruit kids to the gay lifestyle," he told RedEye over the weekend. "Because society wanted to tell itself there was no such thing as gay kids, there were only gay adults—as if we all jumped fully formed out of the backs of gay bars at age 21."

Savage talked about the project, his soon-to-debut show on MTV, "Savage U," and his Chicago roots.

You've gone from being perceived as a funny sex columnist to this giant role model. [Laughs.] I know! I'm gay Jesus now.

How have your perspectives changed?

David Sedaris writes in his essay for the "It Gets Better" book that when he was growing up, he was just a weird kid. No one called him gay because no one knew what gay was.

FML: How Carson McCullers Saved My Life

7:30 p.m. Friday at Steppenwolf Theatre, 1650 N. Halsted St. Through March 18.

Tickets: $20 (for play; post-show discussion is free for ticketholders); 312-335-1650; steppenwolf.org

Now, every kid knows what gay is. It's sort of a double-edge sword. In schools, kids are hypervigilant and scrutinizing their peers for evidence of gayness. And if you live in a bigoted community, these straight kids are watching their parents and preachers and teachers beat up gay people rhetorically or at the ballot box. And they feel that they have license then to beat up gay people in schools that they encounter.

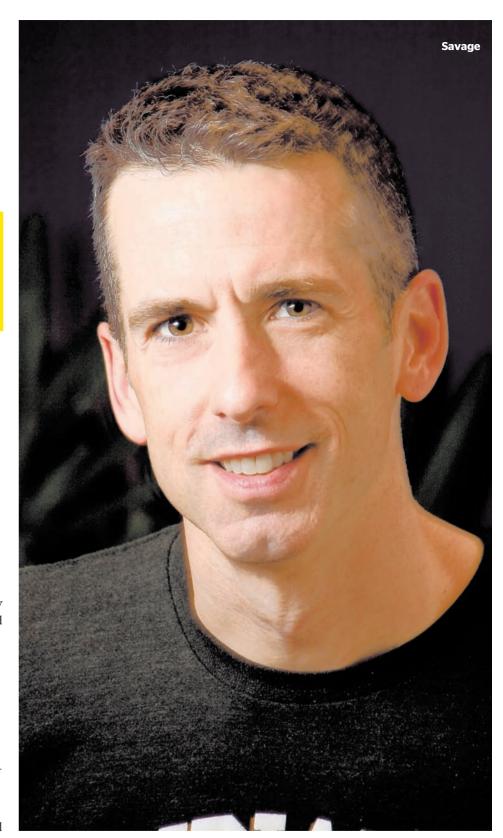

April 3 marks the premiere of "Savage U" on MTV. How did that come to be?

I did a pilot for HBO, and they passed on it, which was good—they were right; it wasn't what it needed to be. And then we went out and pitched a couple other networks. And what's funny is that what we pitched to MTV is not what we're doing for MTV. We pitched a very different show, but we gave them a couple of DVDs of what I do when I go to colleges, where I stand up there at a lectern and take questions anonymously on cards and I read the questions and I answer them. It's called "Savage Love Live"—universities bring me in basically to undo abstinence education in two hours.

And MTV looked at that and said, "We want to do that." So that's what the show is—what I've been doing for almost 15 years with these college speaking gigs. MTV just came along for the ride. We booked schools just for the MTV audience and filmed the Qs and As with the crowd and did some one-on-one sex-advice interventions with some.

Any Chicago colleges?

We went to UIC! It was actually the very first one we went to.

Do you see any influences from your Chicago roots that affect your attitudes and decisions now?

Absolutely! [Laughs.] Ann Landers was a Midwestern girl, and so am I. There's that kind of Midwestern, no-[bleep] way that people in Chicago have of giving you the truth with a little bit of a twinkle in your eye. Even if you're taking the piss out of somebody, you can have them laughing along with you. And I think that's kind of a Chicago Catholic thing.

We're not about to reinvent the wheel, we're just looking to do doughnuts right."

-Do-Rite Donuts & Coffee co-owner Francis Brennan

Next in line in Chicago's boutique doughnut trend: Do-Rite in the Loop

By Erin Sarris | FOR REDEYE

If you think you can't get a specialty doughnut downtown without enduring a line that wraps around the block, get over to Do-Rite Donuts & Coffee (50 W. Randolph St. 312-488-2483), the Loop's newest walk-up doughnut shop in a space carved out of Petterino's.

Disclaimer: We're not promising there won't be lines eventually. (Co-owners Francis Brennan, formerly of L20, and Jeff Mahin—as well as the financial backers at Lettuce Entertain You—certainly hope there will be.) But the shop has been open only since late February, so the word's still getting out about the piping-hot small batches of fried dough, served in 10 to 12 flavors daily. They're turning out a growing number of doughnuts every day, anywhere from 400 to 750 depending on demand.

There are traditional versions such as old-fashioned glazed, chocolate and jelly-filled doughnuts along with more adventurous twists such as the airy, eclair-like French cruller with a maple glaze and candied bacon. Others include a carrot cake doughnut with cream cheese frosting and a pistachio cake doughnut topped with toasted crushed pistachios, and a peanut butter-and-jelly "bullseye" doughnut.

But don't think of it as Doughnut Vault 2.0. While there are similarities (tiny space, coffee to-go, standing room only), Do-Rite also offers curbside pickup, accepts credit cards and opens early at 6:30 a.m. for those on their way to the office.

"We're not about to reinvent the wheel, we're just looking to do doughnuts right," Brennan said. Prices range from $1.75 to $2.95 apiece, or $14.95 for a half-dozen and $29.95 for a dozen. The shop's custom blend of coffee from Dark Matter costs $1 with doughnut purchase.

Do-Rite is open weekdays from 6:30 a.m. until whenever the doughnuts are sold out—usually between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Keep tabs on the shop by following @DoRiteDonuts on Twitter.

TASTING NOTES

Maple & bacon

Candied bacon on top is nice, but the airy cruller-style doughnut sort of collapsed under the weight of the icing.

Old-fashioned buttermilk

Very sweet and perfectly craggy. Crispy and soft in all the right places.

Pistachio

Golden outside with a nicely cakey inside. Not overly sweet with crushed pistachios on top.

Chocolate glazed

In addition to the standard ring of choco glaze, there's an extra smear of rich Valrhona chocolate frosting in the middle. Yum.

Lemon poppyseed

Rectangular in shape with a tart cream filling tasting of actual, not artificial, lemon.

Peanut butter & jelly bullseye

Classic glazed doughnut, but with a big dollop of jam and not-too-sweet, super-creamy peanut butter in the middle.

Los Angeles Times

Actress Malin Ackerman looked dressed up with just a hint of edginess in the Cushnie et Ochs dress she wore to the Grammy Awards. The keyhole opening in the bodice was part of it, but so was the figure-hugging silhouette and the hard-to-find-this-season peplum. Chunky shoes anchored the look, which was accessorized with a simple clutch, bracelet and tcocktail ring.

THREE TO PLAY

BY RYAN SMITH | FOR REDEYE

Mass Effect 3

XB360, PS3, PC

If "Star Wars" and "Battlestar Galactica" made sweet space love and had a baby, it'd look a lot like "Mass Effect." The final chapter in this masterful trilogy combines the colorful and cheeky alien-filled universe of George Lucas' franchise with the thoughtful character drama and complex moral dilemmas of the "Galactica" reboot, and adds a dash of shootem-up action. But while movies and TV offer a single narrative thread, "Mass Effect 3" gives gamers dozens of choices that have a real impact on Commander Shepard's quest to save the universe from an advanced race of machine-like aliens called Reapers. With apologies to another iconic piece of science fiction, "Mass Effect 3" may well be the final frontier of role-playing games.

Asura's Wrath

PS3, XB360

Considering it's a game about a mythical god seeking revenge for the harm done to his family, it's hard not to think of the "God of War" series when playing "Asura's Wrath."

The difference is that you watch the protagonist way more than actually play him. There's some entertaining brawling and random button-pushing throughout, but the bulk of the game feels like a glorified, interactive Japanese anime cartoon. The visuals and presentation are top-notch, but most action gamers likely will be baffled by "Asura's Wrath's" odd lack of interactivity.

SSX

Realistic simulations of sports in gaming can be great fun, but it's nice to see that EA didn't try to turn "SSX" into the "Madden Football" of snowboarding. The exaggerated, over-the-top action that lets gamers pull off multiple, body-contorting 1080 flips while launching off ice-packed ramps lends itself well to the sport. Sometimes the courses can be too chaotic and difficult to navigate, and it lacks true multiplayer, but overall "SSX" is worth the price of admission.

red not MAY 6

That's when Comedy Central will air the second annual Comedy Awards, deadline.com reports. "Modern Family," "30 Rock," "Bridesmaids," "Crazy, Stupid, Love" and Louis C.K. led the pack with five each when nominations were announced Tuesday. The show will tape April 28 in New York.

Someone had the either wonderful or horrible task of putting makeup on my ass. This kind of thing is not a big deal to me."

engineer who has worked with Jay-Z for more than a decade, hinted that a sequel with "Watch the Throne" collaborator Kanye West isn't out of the question. "Hasn't been under way yet, but definitely [it's a] serious consideration," Guru tells Complex magazine.

Kanye on top

Seems like Taylor Swift is over that whole VMA beef with Kanye West. The country starlet appears in the April issue of the Australian edition of Harper's Bazaar sporting not only a Kanye Westdesigned top, but a Margiela wrap. You know, like that one line from "[N-words] in Paris": "What's that jacket, Margiela?" Subtle.

THE DIGIT $400

That's the approximate price for a doggy version of Angelina Jolie's leg-baring Oscars gown, eonline. com reports. The pooch frock is sold by canine couture company Haute Puppy.

The dinosaurs will roam no more: Fox has axed "Terra Nova." The time-travel epic executive-produced by Steven Spielberg got the bad news Monday that it would not be returning next season, the network confirmed in a statement. There's talk of selling the show to another network, but no formal pitch has been put together yet, according to a source connected to the series.
